WASHINGTON, D. C., November 7, 1868.

Howard University.

Rev. D. Sunderland, President of Howard University of this city, has made known the most encouraging progress that has been made in any educational institution since opened in War ; and last year that the medical department was opened for the full, and that there have been added courses covering the law, collegiate, agricultural and theological departments. Law lectures will be delivered this winter by Judge S. S. Jackson. The University will occupy its new building in January next. The Freedmen's Bureau attached those that are incapable from all support to the middle of last month were 10,000, of which 6,000 remained on the 1st inst. The University has a large tract of land adjoining the old site and the Wall Negro Cemetery.

Board of Secretary Stanbery.

The Board of Officers for Treasury Department, a detail of the report stated in Nov. 1st, to the effect that the law lately been adding to bonds, and once that on the contrary in the purchase of bonds it came to enhance the struggle, as in the money market. He has discontinued the issue of a small amount of three per cent. loan certificates. It is not his purpose to inflate the outstanding amount of currency more than the equal to $400,000,000, and to keep it at or near that figure.

The Wants to Recognition.

The parties here who have no other means to demonstrate on this, Grant's return have become convinced that it will not be politic to go out further in that business. The idea of sending by committee over to Harrisburg to congratulate Hartranft upon his success in the late election will be added to the list of things that might have been done, but will not be carried out. The Democracy indeed is in sullen mood.

War Claims Overdrawn.

The contingent of Maryland and Virginia are at logger-heads. A sharp fight took place between the two in the room on the eastern steps of the Capitol on Thursday, between the owners of opposing claims for damages sustained by the invasion of Virginia. The belligerents were falling on what is known as "Illegal Executors," both States claiming indebtedness to each. The Virginia orator gathered his forces and made a charge, which was repulsed by the Maryland officers in their armed vessels, during the contest, one Virginian is said to have received a broken head. The Maryland forces were victorious in their armed vessels, during the contest, one Virginian is said to have received a broken head. The Maryland forces were victorious in the affair.

Personal.

Governor Fairchild, who went North three days ago, will return to-morrow, which is at least a week earlier than he intended when he went away.

Gen. Canby

Expects to leave on Tuesday or Wednesday next, and relieve Gen. Reynolds, who will then assume command of his Regiment, the Twenty-sixth Infantry, which has its headquarters at Austin.

Office of the Secretary.

The Evening Express says that Mr. Lane's long official on the position of the Democratic party, and shows by such that the drag of the party at the present time is to stand firm, to bring to the organization of the Democratic party, and throughout the whole weight of its influence in support of economy and a administration, practical economy in the administration of the Constitution.

Supervisor of Revenue.

The nomination of David S. Hodges as supervisor of Internal Revenue for the Northern District of Illinois, was confirmed to-day by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Washington, November 8, 1868.

Internal Revenue receipts to-night are a million less than was expected. The receipts for the month will be about $15,000,000. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has made large reductions in the number of assessors and collectors, and the force will be further reduced. Returns received from the collectors in the South show the election of Fuller Durham, Conservative, to Congress. The delegation stands four Republicans, two Conservatives, a Democratic gain of one.

Appointments.

The following appointments are announced: Internal revenue assessors—Ninth district of Illinois, Wm. Bross, of Chicago; Fifth district of Indiana, Thomas Hanna, of Indianapolis; Fifth district of Kentucky, Thomas Hanna, of Louisville; Fifth district of Kentucky, Thomas Hanna, of Louisville; Fifth district of Kentucky, Thomas Hanna, of Louisville

The Daily Commercial.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1868.

Iowa and Minnesota have voted largely in favor of universal suffrage, but in Wisconsin the amendment is probably defeated.

It is stated in reputed financial circles that Gladstone is to throw a coalition Tory ministry to-day (Monday) morning. The remaining counties which cast a Lincoln vote, have doubtless given Seymour a considerable majority—perhaps enough to carry the State.

The comments of the foreign press on the result of the Presidential election show that its significance in property understood, and that Grant's character is thoroughly appreciated. Our country never had so high a standing abroad as at the present moment.

The New York city Republicans have determined to attempt to investigate the election frauds there, and the Union League have appointed a committee that will take the matter in hand at once and carry it through to the end. The Republican County Committee will cordially cooperate.

The money crisis experienced a sudden and decided relief in Wall street on Saturday, after it was known that Secretary McCulloch had made up his mind to issue Treasury notes to the extent of fifty millions. The current commenced to flow in an opposite direction from that in which it had been rushing; money became comparatively easy, prices rapidly improved, with gold 134 1-2. It is promised that the gale is over.

It is amusing and somewhat wonderful the way the Democracy are turning in to Grover, pretending to see in him a true-living Democrat. It matters little, except to themselves, how far they carry this. But they should remember that those who affect inconsistency with the millions and affect that the Ku-Klux, must take seats far in the rear, and hide their fame in silence. They must assume Grover when they do anything but this.

If Mr. Seymour's sensibilities are not destroyed, when he reviews the brief list of States that have gone for him, he must experience unending but grim. New York and New Jersey, the only Northern States, were carried by stupendous frauds. Delaware, Maryland and Kentucky would have voted more largely for Jeff Davis or Breckinridge, and took Seymour as their second choice. Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana and Arkansas, perhaps, have gone for him solely, as the result of the reign of terror by the Ku-Klux Klans. If there is anything in such a record that gives him or any of the supporters satisfaction, he certainly is entitled to make the most of it.

The indignation which true Americans must feel as they read the humiliating descriptions of Ravenous Jayhawker's course in England as American Minister, will be measurably compensated for by the fact that his career will be brief, and that what fostering by the allies of the confederacy he has to do, must be done within the next four months. We feel entirely certain that Gen. Grover will lose no time, after he enters on his duties as President, in appointing a true hearted American to represent us at the Court of St. James. From a long list of names from which the selection might be made, there is none more appropriate than that of Enoch H. Sevenoz, whose appointment would secure the highest abilities in that position, and be a recognition of eminent services rendered during the period of the nation's greatest danger and severest trial.

The Chicago Tribune comes out strongly for Doctor A. Wells, Special Commissioner of the Revenue, for Secretary of the Treasury, and believes that either he or E. B. Washburne will be selected for the post. The Tribune's idea about that office is that it should be kept as far from partisan politics as possible, and that "politics ought never to be made a criterion of merit in the collection of the revenue."

Grover's election undoubtedly means an era of moderation in politics, and a greater degree of faithfulness and capability in every branch of the Government, down to the smallest office, all of which can be realized within the Republican party.

ARE THE CUBANS SUPREME?

It looks as though, in regard to the Isabella, the stage in which the question will shortly be, if it be not already presented, is whether the Pacific Railroad shall be a failure for the objects of its construction, or the average dealt with in the degree of security necessary to render the road available from molestation as any other? The policy of the road has been to purchase the good will of the Indians, but of late they have not faithfully observed the understanding, and neither the road nor the country adjacent is able to hold out inducements to peaceably disposed citizens, having objects either of pleasure or business. There is no sort of doubt that the presence of the Indians virtually seals up a vast region, which otherwise would attract a peopling population, whereby the wealth of the nation would be immensely increased. The question is, to what extent shall these people, incapable of improvement or of adding a single cent to the nation's wealth, and in every sense beneath the Indian they prey upon, be clothed with a consideration superior to the objects connected with the Pacific Railroad? In other words, shall an untamed and untamable Indian, or any number of them, be permitted to stop the great national work, or retard the development of the richest portion of our country?

BORROWING TROUBLE.

Certain papers—the New York Tribune among them—are discussing General Butler's present position and probable course toward Grover's administration, or through sometime or him depended the future. It is not understanding General Butler's influence or ability to say that his power will depend on the closeness of his grasp on the Republican party, or how the party's policy may be, or shortly manifest itself by the result of the election, that dejection from it concerning any of the great questions passed upon by the people, will only result in ruin to whoever undertakes it.

General Butler is too shrewd a man not to realize that his scheme for taking public subscription, the further issue of irredeemable paper, and everything of whatever name or nature enabling toward repudiation, and even the remotest bad faith, have been decisively and irrevocably decided against, and that the Republican party is committed before the world to a totally different policy. No public man can be anything except so large to execute the popular will, as it was expressed with unequaled emphasis through the ballot box on the first day of the present month. There can be no new schemes, either of finance or reconstruction, for the present at least. If General Butler or any other Republican chooses to step outside the well defined lines of the Republican party, he will simply sink out of sight. The party of which General Grover is the recognized head and leader, and the principles to which it stands committed, are stronger than any man or combination that can be formed against them. Therefore we think the Tribune is unnecessarily borrowing trouble when it goes into speculations such as are contained in the following:

> "The question now is, how far will the Democratic party be willing to go in the direction of repudiation? Will it be willing to repudiate the whole debt? Will it be willing to repudiate the greenbacks? Will it be willing to repudiate the bonds? Will it be willing to repudiate the bonds? Will it be willing to repudiate the bonds
